"THEY ALWAYS COME BACK."

"Bill" Hattich, ex-editor of the Tombstone Prospector, is "making the rounds" again. He does that once a year. And every time "Bill" wanders through any Cochise town, every newspaper man imagines he envies "Bill". For Hattich has attained the goal for which every man in the game thinks he is striving: financial independence and the knowledge that if he desires, he need never "stick his head in a printshop" as long as he lives.

We all envy "Bill," or think we do. He doesn't have to get up in the morning and rush down to a newspaper office, getting "bawled out" for what is in the paper, or cursed for what is not in; he doesn't have to put in 12 or 15 hours a day trying to rustle news, rewrite the contributed articles, or struggle with head lines that won't fit; he doesn't have to argue with the business office or try to shout louder than the foreman of the composing room; he doesn't have to work while everybody else is going to the movies, riding around in the moonlight or spending an evening at home.

Yes, we all envy "Bill" Hattich. And we envy him all the more when we go to the coast each summer and see that his hardest work is meeting Arizona, who may drop into Los Angeles, and showing them the sights. That is, we think we envy him. Right in our hearts, however, we wonder how he stands it. And we'll wager that about once or twice a week "Bill" Hattich's fingers and feet get itchy and he wishes he could chuck Los Angeles and all his property into the ocean, ride a tourist back to Tombstone and, once more, walk into the old Prospector office and start throwing the paper together just as he did in the good old days.

"Bill" has been out of the newspaper game a good many years. But he'll come back. "They always do."

So we scribes in dear old Cochise will just go on thinking we envy him; no doubt he feels the same about us.—Bisbee Review.

"Built Me Up"

"I USED Cardui for years and it did me more good than any medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. M. C. Ragsdale, of Fort Towson, Okla. "I used to suffer with womanly trouble that weakened me until I was a mere shadow, nervous, and could not sleep. I did not feel like I could live. It seemed that nothing helped me till I heard of Cardui and began to use it. It strengthened me and, as 'twas recommended to do, it regulated and built me up till I was like another woman." If you are weak, run-down and feel that you need a tonic, take Cardui, the woman's tonic, the tonic about which you have always heard, the tonic that helps weak women regain their strength. Cardui acts on the womanly system and helps relieve pain and discomfort due to female ailments. Try Cardui, today, for your trouble.
